Message from the Sheriff

The Las Vegas Metropolitan Police Department met its share of challenges in 2014.

With the opportunity to lead this organization as its 7th Sheriff, I am proud that we have withstood and overcome so much.

Last year, LVMPD weathered budget cutbacks. The ratio of officers to citizens dropped to record lows. And, a heated battle between rancher Cliven Bundy and the U.S. Bureau of Land Management placed us in the middle of an intense standoff that endangered officers' lives.

The largest tragedy last year and arguably in the history of this agency was the brutal slaying of officers Alyn Beck and Igor Soldo. The tragedy of that moment reminded the community of the real dangers officers face and reminded us that most of our community supports us.

We also underwent several key changes organizationally. The body-worn camera pilot program was launched and the new radio system came online last year, making us more technologically advanced than ever before. All of these changes come at a time when more criminals are willing to confront police and where there's a national conversation about police use of force.

Looking ahead, my number one priority is to secure the level of funding needed to put more officers on the streets and ensure Patrol has the backup it needs.

The largest change on the horizon is our move toward decentralization, which will allow officers to be area-focused and share information in real time. For example, officers working a robbery in the Problem Solving Unit can share information on a case with Robbery detectives. Cases will be rerouted to the Area Command where the crime occurred and an investigative sergeant will manage the case load.

I am aware of all of the challenges that lie ahead, but progress is not possible without change. The LVMPD stands apart from others. We have been used as a model for policing across the country and we will continue by being efficient with the resources we have and innovative in the way we do things. I will continue to work with all of you to keep this great city safe.

SHERIFF

Douglas C. Gillespie

A young man in Rochester, New York, pursuing a Bachelor's Degree in Criminal Justice at the Rochester Institute of Technology, accepted an internship with the Rochester Police Department and, with that, Doug Gillespie was convinced he wanted a career in law enforcement.

When he saw that the Las Vegas Metropolitan Police Department was hiring, Gillespie applied and was hired on November 12, 1980. His initial plan was to stay in Las Vegas for four or five years, gain some experience as a police officer, and return to New York to resume his career as a police officer. It didn't take long for Gillespie to embrace Las Vegas and decide to make the city his home.

As a police officer, Gillespie served at the West and South Substations. Promoting to sergeant in 1988, he was assigned to the Southeast Area Command, K-9 Unit, Field Training Office, the Office of the Deputy Chief, and handled various special projects and events. Gillespie indicates that serving as K-9 sergeant stands out among his favorite assignments. Of that position, Gillespie said, "I enjoyed training the dogs, (that) all the calls were hot calls. It was a small, tight group of seven officers. It's definitely a 'working sergeant' position."

Gillespie was promoted to lieutenant in 1995 and served at the Southwest Area Command, the Academy, Training Bureau and SWAT. Promoting to captain in 1998, Gillespie was the bureau commander at Southeast Area Command and the Vice/Narcotics Bureau.

In 2000, Gillespie was appointed as Commander of the Central Patrol Division. In June of 2002, he was appointed to the position of Deputy Chief of the Detention Services Division, before being appointed as Undersheriff by then-Sheriff Bill Young in 2003. Gillespie has the distinction of working for every LVMPD Sheriff, save one, Ralph Lamb. Gillespie and Lamb are now friends.

Gillespie was elected Sheriff in 2006, taking office in 2007. Almost immediately, he encountered, and steered the department through some of the most troubling adversity the LVMPD has faced. When asked to recall some of the more significant incidents of his eight-year tenure, Gillespie quickly rattles off several, "Losing seven officers; explosive (population) growth, the MORE COPS initiative, and hiring 400 officers per year; then the budget and economic recession and hiring no one; use of force issues, working with the Department of Justice and Community Oriented Policing Services office; and building the new Headquarters and North Valley Complex."

Throughout those difficult economic times, Gillespie remained true to his vow that he would not lay-off any department members and, as a result, many department members owe a debt of gratitude to Sheriff Gillespie. He is responsible for starting several programs with LVMPD, as well. Among them, Leadership Development Class; the K-9 Trials, and; as a Commander, he was a founding member of the Health and Welfare Trust. Gillespie was able to find gratification in every assignment, "I never looked at accomplishments as one greater than the other. I never had a bad job. Whether it was administrative or otherwise, I always found something rewarding. (I spent) My first 15 years in a uniform, I always had a connection to that side of the department."

A family man, Gillespie has been married for 32 years. He and his wife, Louise, have two daughters: Karen, an environmental engineer; and Susan, a manager at a hotel on the Las Vegas Strip. Gillespie is pleased to report that he intends to pursue no further profession, "I'm retiring. (I'll) continue to enjoy life, I just won't be coming to work," he says with a smile. "Las Vegas is home, I wouldn't change a thing. I'm not leaving a bitter man. I will miss the people, my co-workers."

Director Susana McCurdy

Susana McCurdy's father was a career military man, serving 30 years in the United States Air Force. Born at Travis Air Force Base in northern California, Susana moved to Las Vegas in 1989 when her father was stationed at Nellis Air Force Base.

In 1993, Susana was hired by the LVMPD as a Police Records Technician in the Records Bureau. She wasn't necessarily looking for a career in law enforcement. Susana says, "I'm a person who prefers stability, and I looked at the police department as a great opportunity."

Susana completed her Bachelor's Degree in Human Resources Management from UNLV in 1994. She transferred to the Personnel Bureau in 1996 as a Senior Law Enforcement Support Technician. Susana spent 15 years in Human Resources, working her way up to Manager.

In 2011, Susana came full circle. She returned to the Police Records Bureau upon being appointed Director, where she continues to serve to this day. Susana still considers herself, "developing from a task-oriented employee to a people oriented leader. I like to see employees succeed, get involved. (I want to) provide opportunities for employees to develop, create a team environment, and promote enthusiasm. I believe if you empower people, they will always return more than you expect."

One great challenge on the horizon for LVMPD, and one that will also affect the Records Bureau, is decentralization. Susana embraces the challenge. She says, "Decentralization will affect the Records Bureau in a positive way. When some of the front desks at area commands were closed in 2013, Records picked up an increase of 38% in front desk traffic, but no increase in personnel due to the fact that budget restraints prevented the department from replacing departing employees. That has led to some back-logs in our workload. The area commands re-opening front desks will allow Records to focus on attacking those backlogs."

She continues, "My ultimate vision is a bureau reorganization which will increase operational efficiency. Records Bureau absorbed Fingerprint Bureau earlier this year. I requested and received a lot of feedback regarding the organization of this bureau, from all sections of the bureau. The resulting reorganization, which will go into effect in July, will be largely based on that feedback. I see an opportunity, as area commands focus on incident crime reporting, for Records to refocus on Records and Fingerprint related duties. These duties include: sealing of records; document management and scanning as we continue to evolve into a paperless work flow; records validation; SCOPE records entry and updating; Uniform Crime Reporting; processing work card applications; Carry Concealed Firearms applications; convicted persons registration; and covering critical 24-hour posts, such as Wanted Vehicle System and teletypes. The opportunities for effective cross-training have never been more significant."

When asked about her leadership philosophy, Susana recalls her mentors and what she learned from them. "My two biggest influences, mentors, are (former Administrative and Sciences Division Director) Cinda Loucks and (former Director of Selection and Classification) Katey Fox. I'm an advocate of professionalism in all aspects and I learned this from them. Treating others with respect, conducting one's self with class, and presenting one's self in a professional manner...this is important to me. I'm most proud of the personnel retention in Records Bureau. We have a 92% retention rate, and keeping people means you're creating a good work environment. The programs we've instituted foster great team-building and interpersonal relationships between team members."

Susana has been married to former LVMPD Assistant Sheriff Greg McCurdy for 12 years, and they have one son, Chase. She is also the proud 'parent' to Emma, her Golden Retriever. Travelling is Susana's passion; she is a student of history and enjoys experiencing different cultures.

She concludes, "Pay it forward and make the time to mentor others, because that's the way you can keep on giving from work generation to work generation. That's my favorite role, to mentor and develop people."

Best Dressed Uniform Award

In April 2014, the North American Association of Uniform Manufacturers & Distributors (NAUMD) announced the winner of its Best Dressed Public Safety Awards program. Developed to recognize the vital role uniforms play in law enforcement and public safety, the awards honor both the departments and suppliers of the uniform program. "The presence of well-uniformed law enforcement professionals in the community reduces anxiety and allows the general public to feel safe and secure," said Richard J. Lerman, President and CEO of the NAUMD. "A professionally created public safety uniform program consists of a well-designed set of garments and accessories that improves both the image and overall comfort of those who proudly wear them. New technologies, fabric enhancements and innovation in design and composition are keys to being judged the best of the best."

Winners were selected by a panel of independent judges composed of industry and apparel experts. The winners were then presented awards on April 4, 2014 during a ceremony at Bally's Las Vegas.
